Morning Educational Program | Miller Park | Molitor Room

Educational Program: Safety Culture with Lean Management Tools

The construction industry has been employing lean principles primarily in field production through Last Planner and Pull Scheduling. Other lean tools are being used to improve contract relationships and improving jobsite coordination. Lean principles can extend further to improve safety and quality of the work performed. This seminar will discuss lean philosophy and the elimination of waste to improve the construction process, especially in the realm of accident elimination. Attendees will learn how to utilize lean tools and a lean attitude to enhance their company's safety culture and improve safety performance.

Presenter Mark Rounds: Vice President of Corporation Development for Vogel Brothers Building Co. In his role, he is responsible for coaching personnel and optimizing systems to improve the overall performance of the organization. He has over 35 years of experience in the construction industry holding positions as laborer, superintendent, project engineer, estimator, senior project manager, and vice president of operations. He is an adjunct professor at the University of Wisconsin Madison and at the Milwaukee School of Engineering, teaching classes in leadership and professional development. Mark is also a past president of the AGC of Wisconsin and is a registered Profession Engineer.
